COOL TOWERS

Last holiday season I went to N.E. Oregon (Pendleton) for a three week visit with the family. My brother is also a Ham so I also belong to the local Ham Club there and have met and talked with most of the locals who are active in the club. After a recent storm they noticed that one of their most popular repeaters was off the air along with another repeater having degraded performance and the Packet Node was down too. They decided to make a visit to the Repeater Site which in December requires a lengthy trip by Snowmobile. Three snowmobiles and 4-5 people made the trip. We make all kinds of complaints about tower problems and wind loading of our antennas here in mostly sunny California. Take a trip to the following web site and see what a little Ice and Snow Storm can do when added to some high winds. The Tower shown is Rohn 45 which is pretty substantial. Especially when the only antennas on it were Verticals. Look at all the photos as there are several comments made about this tower and the other Repeater Tower in the background.

See photos at: http://www.digitalhams.com/spout/ The Repeater location is near Tollgate, Oregon.

Practice Helps!

Author: Rob Carr N3RTR

There's a rule in public safety about emergency and disaster operations: You do in a disaster what you do every other day. I've been in enough emergencies and disasters to vouch for this rule. During a disaster, you don't have time to pull out the disaster plan. You don't even have time to sit back and try to remember what the disaster plan is supposed to be. You simply do whatever you do every day, only a lot quicker and with fewer rest breaks. I believe this applies to amateur radio as well. If you don't use proper radio procedure when you're talking on the repeater, you're not likely to use it when you're in an emergency response. If you don't handle radiograms now and then, you'll have trouble doing it when "The Big One" hits. If you're not used to running (or even checking into) a directed net, you're much more likely to cause disruptions to a directed net during an emergency. If you want to be ready for emergencies:

- 1. Always use good radio procedure, even during drivehome OSOs on the local repeater.
- 2. Hop onto a traffic net now and then and handle some traffic. This means sending traffic now and again. The traffic pads from the ARRL are helpful, but they're even better if you've had practice using them!
- 3. Check into nets informal and directed. Act as NCS on a directed net when you get the chance (but let others have a shot, too!).
- 4. Help out with the non-emergency amateur radio events. Pittsburgh EMS regularly uses the Pittsburgh Marathon as "practice" for a disaster, and I believe that the amateur radio operators who work that (and other events) are much better prepared for a disaster as well.
- 5. Field Day and contests can be used as a way to "shake down" your system. I hilltop during a lot of VHF contests so that my equipment will work if I have to "hilltop" during Reprint via Rich, W6APZ a disaster.
